Relief From Drouth.

Following a drouth which was seriously damaging war gardens and the corn crops of this community a heavy rain fell Sunday evening and showers Monday relieving the intense heat and drouth. Vegetation has been suffering considerably for the want of rain and it came in the nick of time to save most of the late gardens. Owing to the main thoroughfares not being oiled, the dust has been almost unbearable and the showers were truly a blessing.

C. H. S. OPENS MONDAY SEPT. 2

Superintendent, O. F. Galloway Desires All Pupils to Start in at the Opening of School.

French and Domestic Science
to be Stressed.

On Monday morning September 2, at 9 o'clock A. M. the Cloverport Public Schools will open for the 1918-19 session. We are glad to announce that most of last year's teachers will be in the school again this year, which will materially aid in getting things running smoothly without delay. It is earnestly requested that all children who possible can be present at the opening session, so that the classes will not be interrupted by pupils coming in after work has started.

We invite all patrons of the school to attend the opening. Some matters of interest to the community will be discussed among which we may mention the compulsory school law. We shall try to explain this law for the benefit of any who may not fully understand it, so that there may be no misunderstanding later.

The Cloverport High School offers exceptional advantages to pupils of Cloverport and Breckinridge county who wish to secure a first class high school education. We offer a course equal to any school in a town the size of Cloverport, and meet fully the entrance requirements of the best colleges. Besides the usual courses in English, History, Latin, Science and Mathematics, we expect to offer strong courses in French and Domestic Science and if there is a demand for it, Agriculture.

Let us all work together to make this a banner year for the school and make the opening the best in the history of the school.

The superintendent would be glad to hear from anyone who is thinking of entering high school, and show why Cloverport is the best.

O. F. Galloway, Supt.

This work is interesting and will give invaluable experience to fortunate applicants.

Qualified registrants should present themselves to the Local Board and have themselves listed for this service.

DEAN OF HOTEL CLERKS IN KY.

Died in Louisville Friday. Born and Reared in Hardinsburg and Known Throughout The State.

Clerk of Willard Hotel For Forty-three Years.

Alexander Washington Jones, until a short time ago chief clerk of the Willard Hotel and dean of hotel clerks in Louisville, died at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at his home on 245 East Chestnut street. His death was due to Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for some time. He was in his sixty-second year.

Mr. Jones was the oldest hotel clerk in Louisville in point of service having been connected with hotels in the city for the last forty-three years. He was probably the best known hotel man in the State. Repeatedly he had been offered places with hotels in other cities, places that were more lucrative than the one he held, but he preferred to stay in the city. During his years of service he had made a host of friends both in the city and among those who were called upon to travel.

Mr. Jones was born November 13, 1856, in the hotel in Hardinsburg, Ky., of which his father, A. W. Jones, was proprietor. Upon his father's death he accepted a position offered him in Louisville, and March 24, 1873, arrived here to begin his career as hotel clerk with Col. Joseph B. Alexander, at the Alexander Hotel, Eighth and Main streets.

When Col. Alexander became proprietor of the Willard, at the time of Louisville's great exposition, Mr. Jones presided over the office. In those days the Willard was political headquarters and the leading men of the Democratic party gathered there. The famous Patchwork Club was organized at the time with the Willard as its headquarters.

He possessed a cleverness that was astounding in anticipating the wants of the guests, and an unflinching memory of faces and names. Mr. Jones himself was seldom forgotten, for he possessed a beard of such notable length and luxuriance that men once seeing it would never forget it. He was a member of the First Christian church for over thirty years. He was also a member of the Royal Arcanum and the Louisville Lodge of Masons, No. 400.

He is survived by his widow, who was formerly Miss Mollie R. Tucker, daughter of the late T. C. Tucker.

Funeral services will be held from the residence this afternoon at 4 o'clock with burial private in Cave Hill cemetery.

Pall bearers will be Dr. T. D. Finck, Maj. John H. Leathers, W. Scott Miller, George Geutig, J. C. Bennett, Walter S. Edinger, John Settle, Alexander M. Woodruff, Roger G. McGrath and Dr. Gilbert Smith. —Courier-Journal.

Mrs. Elizabeth Collins, sister of Mr. C. C. Powers, of Addison, died very suddenly at her home in Cannelton, Saturday afternoon. She was seventy-three years old and the mother of three sons and two daughters, all of whom survive her.

Mr. Powers, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Wm. Ahl, attended the funeral.

FIRE DESTROYS RESIDENCE AND BARN

Home of Mr. Geo. Denham Caught Fire From Mr.
Aubrey's Barn.

Originated From a Pile of Burning Leaves.

On Saturday evening between 6:30 and 7 o'clock the home of Mr. Geo. Denham on the hill, and the barn of Mr. Will Aubrey, which was near the residence, were both destroyed by fire. The barn was the first to catch fire, quickly spreading to the residence and for a while Mrs. Malinda Beavin's home was in considerable danger. The city's fire extinguishers were used and kept the flames within the confines of the two buildings.

The fire started from a pile of burning leaves. Mrs. Aubrey was cleaning up her back yard and had raked the leaves near the barn and set fire to them. As it happened that everything was so dry from not having any rain, the fire spread very rapidly and before enough men could reach the scene, the barn was burning and the flames leaped to Mr. Denham's cottage.

Mr. Denham and his two daughters purchased their home about a year ago, coming here from off of a farm near town. They saved several pieces of furniture and most of their clothing.

CONGRATULATIONS EXTENDED JUDGE SETTLE

Judge Henson Sends Letter of Felicitation to His Successful Opponent.

Henson Makes Good Majority
in His Home County.

Judge J. W. Henson, of this city, who made a splendid race against Judge Settle, of Warren county, Kentucky, for the democratic nomination for the court of appeals, and lost by a narrow margin, has sent the following letter of congratulation to his successful opponent:

"August 20, 1918.
"Judge W. E. Settle, Frankfort, Ky.
"My Dear Judge:—From the returns it appears that in the recent primary you won over me by a fairly close margin the nomination for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

"You are to be congratulated upon the successful race you made. While I was disappointed in the outcome, still I greatly appreciate the splendid vote I received all over the district; and especially am proud of having carried my own county by a 2,820 majority, the largest majority ever given a candidate here, and that, too, without my having spent a single day in the campaign in this county. I am very grateful to my friends, as doubtless you are to yours, for their cordial support.

"Of course I am for you now, and shall vote for you at the November election.

"With kindest regards, I am
"Yours truly,
"J. W. HENSON."

GREEN RIVER DISTILLERIES DESTROYED

By Fire Saturday Evening in Owensboro. Millions Lost.
Practically Covered by Insurance.

Light From Huge Flames Perceptible Here.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 26.—Great piles of debris are all that remain of the big distilling properties of the Green River Distilling Company, which were destroyed by fire here Saturday night, causing a loss between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. Officials of the company estimated that 45,000 barrels of whisky valued at $1.35 a gallon were destroyed. The whisky was fully insured.

The insurance companies pay on policies according to the market value of whisky on the day of the fire. Officials of the company say they have recently been selling Green River whisky as high as $2.50 a gallon. However, the market value at the time of the fire was around $1.35. In addition to the loss sustained by the Green River, the Rock Springs Distilling Company lost 600 cases of whisky which were on a side-track. Four hundred more cases of Green River whisky were being placed in the car. The Green River had many large orders on hand.

Owing to the distant location of the distillery the firemen could not use their hose and the chemical engine could not defeat the fire which had gained headway into the storeroom where 20,000 cases of whisky were stored. Unable to handle the situation the firemen returned to the city and left the flames to play their part in the destruction of more whisky than ever "went up in smoke" in any previous distillery fire.

By the destruction of 43,000 barrels of whisky, it is estimated the United States Government will lose approximately $6,000,000 which would have gone into the treasury as Federal tax.

J. W. McCulloch is president of the Green River Distilling Company.

On the railroad track at the side of the distillery property was the mangled body of a white man. He had been one of the many who had drunk of the whisky that was running in streams into a ravine that led to the Ohio river. He fell into a stupor on the railroad track and was cut to pieces by early morning trains. So badly was his body mangled that it has been impossible to identify the man.

LITTLE GIRL GETS THREE RIBS BROKEN

When She Attempted to Jump a Ford Motor Truck as it Was Moving.

SAYS IT WAS ALL HER FAULT.

Little Miss Grace Landers, who spends most of her time with her grandmother, Mrs. H. Blair on the Cloverport and Hardinsburg pike was badly injured Friday afternoon when she playfully attempted to jump on a Ford motor truck as it was passing along the pike. In so doing the child's dress evidently caught in the chain gear on the side of the car and pulled her underneath as her dress was considerably torn and covered with chain grease.

The truck was driven by Mr. H. L. Stader of this place, who was returning home from Hardinsburg after delivering ice in that city. Mr. Stader noticed the little girl in the road as he was driving along and had a little boy in the rear of the truck, but did not see the child trying to jump on the car and not until he heard her cry did he realize what had happened. Mr. Stader picked her up and took her to her grandmother's and a physician was summoned immediately who said the child had three ribs broken. It is believed this is the extent of the injuries.

Little Miss Landers is about ten years old and when Mr. Stader went to see the following day she was very anxious that the blame of the accident should not be upon him and she told him, "It was all my own fault." The child's mother lives in Louisville but was here when the accident occurred.

American Soldiers Given a Message From King George.

As the American soldiers arrive in France each one is handed a personal greeting from King George which says: "Soldiers of the United States, the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand besides the armies of many nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.

The Allies will gain new heart and spirit in your company. I wish that I could shake the hand of each of you and bid you God speed on your mission." George R. I. April 1918.

A copy of this message is in the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gregory from their son, Casper Gregory, who landed in France a short while ago with his brother, Norman Gregory.

The message is a reproduction of King George's handwriting and is printed on a single sheet with the royal coat of arms.

WITH THE HOME BOYS IN SERVICE

From Capt. S. T. Bandy.
Captain Stephen T. Bandy, who is with the 316th Ammunition Train in France, is the son of Mrs. E. J. Bandy, of Stephensport, Ky.

Dear Mamma: I am now in France after a pleasant voyage from the United States. The country is exceptionally beautiful and the people are very friendly and courteous to the Americans. I am stationed near a large town although the entire country is dotted with pretty little villages. This is a great wine country and the people drink it with their meal. They also raise lots of potatoes, onions and other vegetables.

There is not much news that I can write you. I am well and have plenty to eat. People in the United States get all the news about the war from the papers. I will write every week or two and will expect you to write me times. This letter will have to do for all the letters I owe Maxie Lucille.

From your son,
Capt. Stephen T. Bandy, 316th Ammunition Train, A. E. F., France.

Had Little Thought of Ever Being in This War.

Pvt. James Pate, who is in France, writes his mother, Mrs. Winfield Pate, that he never thought he would ever be in this war when he was reading about it three or four years ago. His letter reads:

Dear Mother: Will try to write you a few lines in answer to your letters received yesterday. I was glad to hear from home and to know that all are well. I am just fine myself and would love very much to see you all, but don't know when I will. This is a fine country over here and fine people too. They are so friendly, and believe me, they had a time before the war. Of course now everything is tore up in some places, but still they haven't given up yet by no means. They all greet Americans with a smile and try to talk to us. Some have learned our language a little and we can talk to them in their language some, but by and by we will learn to talk to them all right.

We all want to see our friends at home, but I have never seen a homesick American soldier yet. They take us in the trenches for a few days then we are sent back to some town to rest up for a while. And believe me we are in a nice one now. In a big hotel like living at home now.

I have been in the trenches now and know a little about it. You know one never knows anything until he has had some experience and when I used to read about this war three or four years ago, I didn't realize that one day I would be there in it, but things will happen. You know I am glad I am here, I would not be satisfied at home and all the other boys gone over here so you must not worry about me at all. I am well and strong and as healthy as I ever was in my life.

Tell every one "Hello" for me. Guess Dixie had a good time in Owensboro. I used to have a girl there.

Well I must close now. Mamma, that tobacco, just let it go. I probably would never get it so please answer soon. I am as ever your loving son, James.

Pvt. McGary Writes to The News.

Mr. John D. Babbage, Editor The Breckinridge News, Cloverport, Ky. Dear Mr. Babbage: The Breckinridge county boys of my company requested me to write a letter to The Breckinridge News so the people of our county might know that some of their boys had crossed the big pond and are in line with our Allies to lick the "Boches" or "duty cows" as the French call them.

Now there are several of the Breckinridge county boys in this Company and I will give their names later in my letter. We were formerly with Co. M., 336th Infantry, 84th Division, N. A., but were transferred to Co. M., 6th Inf., 5th Div., Regulars on February 18th and we arrived in France in April.

I will now try and tell you someday evening enroute for Custer to visit Mrs. Carlton's mother, Mrs. Anne Sprigate.

Mrs. D. D. Dowell and mother, Mrs. Lucy Haynes, of Hardinsburg, are visiting their sister and daughter, Mrs. W. H. LeGrand.

The farmers have begun cutting tobacco at this place.

D. D. Dowell, of Hardinsburg, was the guest, Sunday, of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. LeGrand.

Mrs. Fonza Milburn and daughter, of Mattoon, Ill., are visiting her father, thing of the country as we saw it remark I heard from the boys was "what fine roads this country has." We have not traveled a dust road or seen one, and what is most remarkable is the shade trees along them. You can trace the roads for miles winding through the beautiful valleys and across the mountains. Now for agriculture, it does not measure up to the States, but there is more waste land in Breckinridge county than I have seen in all my travel across France. For crops, they do not raise any here. Rye, wheat, oats and hay are the field crops, hay is their big field harvest. Their beautiful vineyards have the appearance of a flower garden to us boys who have not seen them before.

Now with the other boys helping me we will tell of our little experiences in the trenches. For fifteen days, except for the rats, we were not disturbed but one time. On the fifth of July the Boche decided to celebrate at our expense and they had the satisfaction of shooting a few holes in the air. The first time you hear a big shell whistling near you, it is not a pleasant feeling and it does not take you long to decide what to do. We soon found the shortest route to the dugout, but we were very thankful that he shared his home with us. There is one thing we have got to do if we come back to the States with a whole hide, that is to move quick. You have got to move and do your thinking afterwards. Now this the life in France and the trenches as we Breckinridge fellows see it.

I will now give you the names of the Breckinridge county boys: Corporals, Robert Noble, Gilbert Glasscock, Pvt. Johnny Avitt, William C. Mattingly, William T. Jolly, Leslie Jones, James Pate, James Wood, James Ritchie, William Tate, Coleman Wheatley, Herman Smith, Orville Norton, Hubert Parks, Estell Payne, Willard Pryor, Sherman Gibson. There are other B. C. boys in our regiment but in different Companies, they are: Eugene Miller, Raymond Mingus, William Dowell, Charlie Hobbs.

We hope this letter will be worthy of space in your paper and we all join in to wish you and the people of Breckinridge success and happiness.

Yours truly,

Pvt. Eugene McGary,
Co. M., 6th Infantry, A. P. O. 745 A. E. F., France.

P. S. On a separate sheet you will find a poem entitled "One Day of A Soldier's Life as Seen by Pvt. John W. Mills."

"One Day of A Soldier's Life as Seen by Pvt. John W. Mills."
Co. M., 6th Infantry from Winnabou, N. C.

"There is a rattle of bells and rifles, When the bugle sounds patrol; We all stand at attention While Old Glory climbs the pole. We all wait and listen for mess call to sound.

For a soldier is always ready when chow time comes around. When breakfast is over And your mess washed and dried You hear a hateful whistle blow Which means every man outside.

When every cigarette bit is picked up And the Company street all swept. Get your belt and rifles and do it with some pep. If you are just a minute slow Or your shoes don't shine, The Captain says "wake up there guy."

Or you will get double time! Then go to the drill field marching four abreast And drill from eight to twelve without a single rest. Then go into dinner all blue and worn thread bare Get a cussing by the Mess Sergeant if you have not combed your hair. And before you have time to change your mind, Its go out to bayonet drill; And the Sergeant sits down And says, "boys practice at will." You drill all day and half the night, And all you want to hear, Is the bugle sound recall. And if you speak after nine, No matter what about, The Sergeant says, "Cut out the noise For the lights are out!" So there we are--

RUTH LAW, THE FLYING WONDER, TO BREAK AIR RECORDS AT FAIR

No more sensational, thrilling or inspiring sight could be imagined than Ruth Law's aerial performance in her Curtiss biplane, in which she soars high above the clouds, or skims like a dipping swallow almost within reach of the earth as she spirals, loops, rides taxi up-side-down, banks, nose-spins and volplanes, and visitors to the sixteenth annual Kentucky State Fair, which will be held in Louisville the week of September 9-14, will be electrified twice daily during the week and twice on Sunday preceding the Fair by this peerless wonder of the air. The Sunday flights, in which Miss Law will go after the altitude record and her own wonderful loop-the-loop score, are part of a special Sunday program, which includes a magnificent sacred concert by Thavlu's Band of forty musicians, his special soloists of international fame, and a massed chorus of over three hundred singers from the Jubilate Choral Association, of Louisville, with Fred O. Neutzel, Flora Marguerite Bartelle, Marie Sled-fried and Leo Sandman as principals. The first-named has given invaluable co-operation with the Fair as regards the Sunday concert arrangements and his connection with the Choral Association guarantees a musical feature of exceptional merit, and one which vies with the great attractions offered in Ruth Law, who is sister to Rodman Law, the first "human fly" and one of the most daring and remarkable performers of break-neck stunts in existence. It is claimed that Miss Law's one ambition is to equal or excel her famous brother, who has performed all and more of the hair-raising feats Douglas Fairbanks supposedly performs in his screen "thrillers."

In addition to these great attractions the Fair management is this year offering a prize list which will total to $78,000, despite the fact that the state's appropriation to the Fair is but $15,000. This is done, and the entire proceeds from all sources turned back among the agriculturists in order to stimulate the agricultural and live stock industries of the state and thereby help the Government by helping food production.

DANGER OF TOO MUCH OPTIMISM.

Undoubtedly the war news of the past month or more has been most encouraging, and with Gen. March's latest announcement that America has thirty-two divisions composed of 1,440,000 men in France and with fifty-eight more divisions over there, the war will end in 1919—we are more encouraged than ever. But with all of this good news there is apt to be danger of us being too optimistic, hence a slacking up in our war activities and a resting back on our oars thinking the battle almost won.

Mr. Floyd Gibbons who has been over there right along in the front line trenches acting as a war correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, has come home invalided and is making lectures over the country for the specific purpose of driving home to the American people two warnings, namely: that we be not unduly optimistic over the Allied successes on the Marne; and that we be prepared to withstand the winter peace drive which Germany will surely make over here by the way of neutral countries if she fails, as she will, to get the military decision this year.

Mr. Gibbons said in one of his lectures that the Allied drive this summer was not really a drive nor did Foch intend that it should be, he was merely trying to disrupt the German plans. And furthermore, said Mr. Gibbons, "the American people must not make the mistake of thinking the morale of the Germans is broken. The morale of the Boche soldiers fighting at the front is excellent; however I would not say as fine as the Americans."

We believe in people being optimistic and there is no gift so enviable as that of being able to always see the bright side of everything, however there is a happy medium and it is this we want to strike. We have not won the war yet and certainly no human being can tell us when it will be over, we are all merely guessing. The surest and safest thing for us to do is to keep on with our food conservation, our buying of W. S. S., our war gardening, our knitting and buying of more bonds and with it all keep steady in the boat until we have reached the P. shore safely.

Mr. Hoover on his return trip from the Allied countries, and reports that the people over there haven't the least fear of going hungry this winter because they are depending on America to feed them. Certainly there is nothing like having a reputation for dependableness. One of the greatest lessons to be gotten out of this war is the supreme importance of individuals and nations learning the value of being dependable.

The woman who stays at home, tends her war garden then cans her products for winter use and at the same time is complying with all the food regulations and putting three good meals a day on the table for her family, is the most loyal patriot we know of she along with the rest of the heroes and heroines, deserves a page in the world's war history.

FARM AND STOCK.

Remember the Whitworth sale near Stephensport next Saturday.

Charlie Tabeling, Tar Fork, was enroute to Louisville, Monday. He said that the rain was worth $300 to his tobacco crop.

A glorious rain came Monday just in time to save our parched and dried up crops. Really crop conditions in this county were getting serious and many farmers had almost despaired of making anything at all. Now they are wearing a broad smile and feeling better.

Beard Brothers closed a sale last week with the American Tobacco Co. for 900,000 pounds of dark tobacco at very satisfactory prices. This sale closes their purchases for the season which were around 3,000,000 pounds and representing a cash outlay of nearly $600,000.00. All this money went into the hands of farmers of Breckinridge county. It is a credit to this enterprising firm of "home grown boys" who are not afraid to do things and do them quick and successfully. They have made money. It will be kept right here at home and go into the home channels of home trade.

A. V. Whitworth returned from West Point Monday. He reports that he bought the W. L. Miller farm 6 miles above West Point. It is well improved has a dwelling on it that cost $5,000 to build and on a good road. It cost him $7,000. Mr. Whitworth is a mighty good citizen, a splendid farmer and we hate to lose him from our county. Our loss is Hardin county's gain.

George Campbell, special correspondent of the New York Sun on the Western Front, says:

"We have now had fifteen practically rainless days and, while accustomed to consider the weather only in relation to military operations, the blessing the fortnight's dryness has been to northern France in allowing farmers to harvest their crops, is beyond compute. They have practically harvested all their grain. The crops are generally good and in some sections very good. Beets and potatoes promise especially well."

DISABLED SOLDIERS REFITTED FOR DUTY

Work of American Reconstruction Hospital Division Proves Highly Successful.

The success attained by the reconstruction division in fitting disabled soldiers for full or partial duty is indicated in detailed reports from five general hospitals, made public by the surgeon general of the army.

Of the 537 cases sent to these hospitals from overseas and base hospitals in this country, 151 are now able to return to full duty and 212 are able to return for partial duty. Only 39 of these soldiers will be unable to follow their old occupation. A total of 122 will be able to return to their old employment and do efficient work despite their injuries.

"From the time these men landed in the United States, an effort has been made to keep their minds and hands occupied," says the war department statement. "Curative education has been practiced with satisfactory results. The men have shown interest in the 'ward occupations,' which consist of wood carving, knitting, weaving, block printing, bead work, knotted work, embroidery, educational work and typewriting. Where facilities have been provided to give the men academic studies a genuine interest has been shown to improve their mental condition so as better to prepare them to make progress in civil occupations.

After the men reach the point where they could leave the wards they were instructed in shops and schools. Quartermaster repair shops are located near some of the hospitals, and these are used to give instruction to the men in mechanical occupations. At the present time 132 soldiers are taking courses in automobile mechanics and repair work. Shorthand and typewriting have attracted the attention of 151.

GREATEST WAR HERO IS LIAR

Medal-Bedecked Rene Has Tales of Daring Galore.

ALL PROVEN TO BE FICTION

Publication of Photograph in French Newspaper Leads to Exposure of Greatest Fakir of the War—Enjoys Confidence of Army Officers and the Credit of Leading Paris Cafes—Amputates Own Leg.

The heroic exploits and hairbreadth escapes of D'Artagnan, as narrated by Dumas in "The Three Musketeers," fade into comparative insignificance when compared with the achievements of Rene Betrand, as told by himself. Minus an arm and a leg, with nine medals glittering on his breast, and asserting that his body bore more than thirty bullet and bayonet wounds, "Private Rene Betrand of the French colonial infantry" posed in Paris as the greatest hero of the war.

Now he has been arrested as perhaps one of the war's greatest fakirs and the police authorities declare that he lost his leg and arm in a railway accident and that five imprisonments, instead of five citations, composed his record.

Meantime, while reveling in the fruits of his own romance, Betrand enjoyed the confidence of army officers and the credit of the leading Paris cafes.

Bedecked With Medals.

The medals he wore included the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the military medal, the war cross with seven palms and five stars, the British military cross, the Belgian war cross, the colonial medal, medal of Morocco, and the medal for saving life, and the medal for wounds. In addition, he wore the "fouragere" of the Legion of Honor.

Where he got them has not been disclosed, but to account for them Betrand constructed a story of wonderful incidents. According to this tale he won the military medal by saving the lives of two officers and was himself wounded in the thigh when surrounded by natives while fighting with the French territorial forces in Morocco, in 1913.

Then, according to his own story, Betrand won the war cross in a patrol exploit in the present war, when, after his companions were killed, he captured a whole German cooking outfit at Laon, having killed most of the cooks. Next, fighting with the British on the Somme, he won the military cross by capturing 12 Germans single-handed. Meantime, he had been captured five times by the Germans, but always managed to escape.

In the next chapter of his biography Betrand appears in the fight around Monastir on the Macedonian front, where he simultaneously operated four machine guns and wreaked such an awful havoc with the enemy that their attack was beaten off. At the battle of Monastir he essayed to rescue an officer who lay wounded in No Mun's Land and was himself wounded in the abdomen. Despite his pain, he dragged the officer back to safety and went out again to rescue a wounded nurse. In the last trip his arm was shattered by a bullet and later was amputated.

"Amputates Own Leg."

Next we find Betrand a passenger aboard a ship bound for France. The torpedo which hit the vessel shattered one of Betrand's legs. Calmly amputating it with his knife, Betrand bound up the stump, dragged himself to the rail, threw himself overboard, paused long enough to rescue the captain and swam to a piece of driftwood, where he lived for three days and three nights before being rescued by a Spanish vessel. For this Betrand said he received the medal of the Legion of Honor.

Numerous stars and leaves of palms that Betrand wore upon his war cross had been acquired, according to his tale, by 12 distinct acts of heroism worthy of the coveted cross, but the details of these incidents have not yet been given to the public.

SHARE OUR SUGAR WITH THE ALLIES

British Get Two Pounds a Month. French Pound and Half, Italians One Pound.

GERMAN SUPPLY PLENTIFUL

All Nations Permit Use of Sweetening for Home Preserving Purposes.

America's new sugar ration of two pounds a month per person is equitable when compared with the sugar ration enforced by rigid governmental order in England, France and Italy, nations with which we are sharing sugar.

Each Allied nation—in the matter of sugar consumption—is sharing on nearest possible equal terms the hardships imposed by greatly altered conditions in the world sugar situation.

Formerly classed as a luxury, sugar is now a war time essential. The fair and just division of this essential is in the hands of the various Allied food controllers.

The United States Food Administration has asked this nation to observe a voluntary sugar ration of two pounds per person a month.

In the other countries at war with Germany sugar is one of the scarce articles on every menu—whether in the households of both rich and poor, or in the hotels.

England today has a sugar ration of two pounds per month per person. In France the ration is a pound and a half and in Italy it is one pound a month. And the prices in allied countries are from two to three times as high as in America.

If you go to a hotel in England or France these days and order tea or coffee they serve absolutely no sugar with it. If you want sugar you must bring it with you.

In England it is allowable to use one-seventh of an ounce of sugar in the preparation of each luncheon. In France many persons carry little sacharine tablets about with them for use in hotels and in England rich and poor must take their sugar with them if they wish to have sweetened tea while visiting friends.

Before the war started France had 625,000 acres devoted to sugar production. By 1917 the French sugar acreage had decreased to 180,000 acres. Today the French man or woman with a sugar card has no assurance whatever that he or she will be able to actually buy sugar. To buy it, one must first find it.

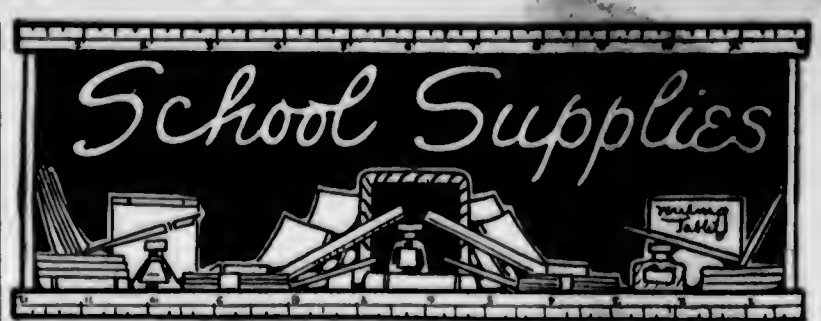

Italy Has "State Sugar." Especially drastic regulations govern the use of sugar in Italy. Its manufacture, distribution and sale are closely controlled, and in part actually taken over by the state.

Saccharine is permitted to be sold and used as a substitute for sugar and the government manufactures a mixture of saccharine and sugar called "State Sugar," which is largely used.

German Sugar Ration Adequate. Germany, before the war, produced a great surplus of sugar and exported large quantities. Today the Germans have virtually gone out of the export business, but have plenty of cheap sugar for home use.

Wholesale prices prevalent in the Allied nations, according to information received by the United States Food Administration are as follows: England, 10 cents a pound; France, 12 cents; Italy, 20 cents.

While these high prices are being paid abroad the American wholesale price is being held at 7 1/2 cents.

CHAPTER XIX.

In the Road of the Good Children.

Haeckel crept to a window and looked out. Bonfires were springing up in the open square in front of the government house. Mixed with the red glare came leaping yellow flames. The wooden benches were piled together and fired, and by each such pyre stood a gesticulating, shouting red demon.

Guns were appearing now. Wagons loaded with them drove into the square, to be surrounded by a howling mob. The percentage of sober citizens was growing—sober citizens no longer. For the little king had not been shown to them. Obviously he could not be shown to them. Therefore rumor was right, and the boy was gone.

Against the palace, therefore, their rage was turned. The shouts for the little king turned to threats. The archbishop had come out on the balcony accompanied by Father Gregory. The archbishop had raised his hands, but had not obtained silence. Instead, to his horror and dismay, a few stones had been thrown.

He retired, breathing hard. But Father Gregory had remained, facing the crowd fearlessly, his arms not raised in benediction, but folded across his chest. Stones rattled about him, but he did not flinch, and at last he gained the ears of the crowd. His great voice, stern and fearless, held them.

"My friends," he said, "there is work to be done, and you lose time. We cannot show you the king, because he is not here. While you stand there shrieking, his enemies have their will of him. The little king has been stolen from the palace."

He might have swayed them, even then. He tried to move them to a search of the city. But a pallid man, sweating with excitement, climbed on the shoulders of two companions, and faced the crowd.

"Aye, he is stolen," he cried. "But who stole him? Not the city. We are loyal. Ask the palace where he is. Ask those who have allied themselves with Karain. Ask Mettlich."

There was more, of course. The cries of "To the palace!" increased. Those behind pushed forward, shoving the ones ahead toward the archway, where a line of soldiers with fixed bayonets stood waiting.

The archduchess and Hilda with a handful of women, had fled to the roof, and from there saw the advance of the mob. Hedwig had haughtily refused to go.

At the hospital, Haeckel, the student, stood by his window, and little by little the veil lifted. His slow blood stirred first. The beating of drums, the shrieks of the crowd, the fires, all played their part. Another patient joined him, and together they looked out.

"Bad work!" said the other man. "Aye!" said Haeckel. Then, speaking very slowly, and with difficulty, "I do not understand."

"The king is dead."

"Aye," observed Haeckel, still uncomprehending. And then, "Dead—the king?"

"Dend. Hear the bell."

"Then—" But he could not at once formulate the thought in his mind. Speech came hard. He was still in a cloud.

"They say," said the other man, "that the crown prince is missing, that he has been stolen. The people are frenzied."

He went on, dilating on the rumors. Still Haeckel labored. The king! The crown prince! There was something that he was to do. It was just beyond him, but he could not remember. Then, by accident, the other man touched the hidden spring of his memory.

"There are some who think that Mettlich—" "Mettlich!" That was the word. With it the curtain split, as it were, the cloud was gone. Haeckel put a hand to his head.

A few minutes later, a strange figure dashed out of the hospital. The night watchman had joined the mob, and was at that moment selecting a rifle from a cart. Around the cart were students, still in their carnival finery, wearing the colors of his own corps. Haeckel, desperate of eye, pallid and gaunt, clad still in his hospital shirt and trousers, Haeckel climbed on to the wagon, and mounted to the seat, a strange swaying figure, with a bandage on his head. In spite of that, there were some who knew him.

"Haeckel!" they cried. The word spread. The crowd of students pressed close.

"What would you do?" he cried to them. "You know me. You see me now. I have been done almost to death by those you would aid. Aye, arm yourselves, but not against your king. We have sworn to stand together. I call on you, men of my corps, to follow me. There are those who tonight will murder the little king and put King Moh on the throne. And they be those who have tortured me. Look at me! This they have done to me." He tore the bandage off, and showed his scarred head. "Quick!" he cried. "I know where they hide, these spawn of hell. Who will follow me? To the king!"

"To the king!"

They took up the cry, a few at first, then all of them. More than his words, the gaunt and wounded figure of Haeckel in the cart fought for him. He reeled before them. Two leaped up and steeled him, finally, indeed, took him on their shoulders, and led the way. They made a wedge of men, and pushed through the mob.

"To the little king!" was the cry they raised, and ran, a flying wedge of white, fantastic figures. Those who were unarmed seized weapons from the crowd as they passed. Urged by Haeckel, they ran through the streets.

Haeckel knew. It was because he had known that they had done away with him. His mind, working now with almost unnatural activity, flew ahead to the house in the Road of the Good Children, and to what might be enacting there. His eyes burned. Now at last he would thwart them, naless—

Just before they turned into the street, a horseman had dashed out of it and flung himself out of the saddle. The door was bolted, but it opened to his ring, and Nikky faced the conclave, Nikky, with a drawn revolver in his hand, and a face deathly white.

He had had no time to fire, no time even to speak. The revolver flew out of his hand at one blow from the flail-like arms of the conclave. Behind him somewhere was coming, Nikky knew, a detachment of cavalry. But he had outdistanced them, riding frenziedly, had leaped hedges and ditches across the park. He must hold this man until they came.

Struggling in the grasp of the conclave, he yet listened for them. From the first he knew it was a losing battle. He had lost before. But he fought fiercely, with the strength of a dozen. His frenzy was equalled by that of the other man, and his weight was less by a half. He went down finally and lay still, a battered, twisted figure.

But Black Humbert, breathing hard, had heard sounds in the street, and put up the chain. He stood at bay, a huge, shrunken figure at the foot of the stone staircase. He was for flight now. But surely—outside at the door some one gave the secret knock of the tribunal, and followed it by the password. He breathed again. Friends, of course, came for the ammunition. But, to be certain, he went to the window of his bureau, and looked out through the bars. Students!

"Coming!" he called. And kicked at Nikky's quiet figure as he passed it. Then he unbolted the door, dropped the chain, and opened the door.

Standing before him, backed by a great crowd of fantastic figures, was Haeckel.

They did not kill him at once. At the points of a dozen bayonets, intended for vastly different work, they forced him up the staircase, flight after flight. At first he cried pitifully that he knew nothing of the royal child, then he tried to barter what he knew for his life. They jeered at him, pricked him shamefully from behind with daggers.

At the top of the last flight he turned and faced them. "Gentlemen, friends!" he implored. "I have done him no harm. It was never in my mind to do him an injury. I—"

"He is in the room where you kept me?" asked Haeckel, in a low voice.

"He is there, and safe."

Then Haeckel killed him. He struck him with a dagger, and his great body

Then Haeckel Killed Him.

fell on the stairs. He was still moving and groaning, as they swarmed over him.

Haeckel faced the crowd. "There are others," he said. "I know them all. When we have finished here, we will go on."

They were fearful of frightening the little king and only two went back with the key that Haeckel had taken from the body of Black Humbert. They unlocked the door of the back room, to find his majesty sitting on a chair, with a rather moist handkerchief in his hand. He was not at all frightened, however, and was weeping for his grandfather.

"His carriage come?" he demanded. "I am waiting for a carriage."

They assured him that a carriage was on the way, and were very much at a loss.

"I would like to go quickly," he said. "I am afraid—my grandfather—Nikky!"

For there stood Nikky in the doorway, a staggering, white-lipped Nikky. He was not too weak to pick the child up, however, and carry him to the head of the stairs. They had moved the body of the conclave, by his order. So he stood there, the boy in his arms, and the students, only an hour before in revolt against him, cheered mightily.

They met the detachment of cavalry at the door, and thus, in state, rode back to the palace where he was to rule, King Otto the Ninth. A very sad little king, for Nikky had answered his question honestly. A king who mopped his eyes with a very dirty handkerchief. A weary little king, too, with already a touch of indigestion!

Behind them, in the house on the Road of the Good Children, Haeckel, in an access of fury, ordered the body of the conclave flung from a window. It lay below, a twisted and shapeless thing, beside the pieces of old Adelbert's broken sword.

PREVENT LOSSES IN SHIPPING POTATOES

Scarcity of Barrel Stock Makes Use of Sacks Necessary.

Care Must Be Exercised in Handling to Prevent Bruising and Crushing —Complete Ventilation Must Be Furnished.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Owing to the scarcity of barrel stock, many shippers of early potatoes will sack their product this season. Care must be taken in handling and loading sacked potatoes to prevent bruising and crushing, as early varieties are particularly susceptible to decay following injuries. They must also be loaded in such a way that complete ventilation of the shipment will be insured. In some parts of the country, sacked early potatoes are loaded on end one layer high, and the second layer is loaded on end on a temporary rack a few inches above the bottom layer. This rack is constructed of three 2 by 4 inch stringers, lengthwise of the car, at the sides and through the center, supported by posts, a little higher than the bottom layer. The bottom and top layers are then loaded simultaneously and boards, to support the top layer are nailed across the stringers as the sacks are put in place. This has the advantage of allowing sufficient space for ventilation and preventing crushing the potatoes in the bottom of the load by the weight of the sacks above.

Serious losses in potatoes now held in common storage can be largely reduced if growers and shippers take necessary precautions in the management of their storage houses. All ventilators and doors should be kept closed during the daytime and storage rooms ventilated at night, when the minimum outdoor temperature prevails. Allowing the doors to remain open during the day while grading or loading potatoes may result in gradually raising storage temperatures, permitting the rapid development of decay, and greatly increasing the losses from shrinkage. To maintain suitable temperature and humidity conditions in potato storage houses during the remainder of the present season requires the closest attention of growers and shippers in the management of their houses. The transfer of common storage stock into cold storage in order to avoid excessive losses due to unfavorable storage conditions is a practical means of reducing storage losses, where such a practice is feasible.

thanks for the one you sent me the 7.
We are having awful dry warm weather here now. The gardens are a failure.

We enjoy the letters from the home
boys in service so much.

This afternoon we visited some boys in the base hospital who have been in France. It is a pathetic sight to see them. Some boys have been gassed, some have lost a limb, some shell-shocked and different other wounds, but all are cheerful and at the same time have a longing for home. There are boys from all parts of the United States.

We see by the News that everything is fine in Cloverport. We have a longing for home occasionally but will make the best of it until after the war and then we will see old Cloverport again.

Best wishes,
Mrs. Layton Furrow,

SAYS GOVERNMENT NEEDS PLATINUM

Dr. Charles L. Parsons, chief chemist of the bureau of mines, is the government's platinum expert and leader of the movement to refuse to wear platinum in jewelry while the government is in such urgent need of it for munitions. This metal is indispensable to the government for the manufacture of many articles of warfare, and yet, Doctor Parsons says, one-third of the world's supply has been used unproductively in jewelry.

BEFUDDLED GERMANS FEAR "CRAZY" YANKS

Say Americans Are Likely to Come Over Top Any Time,
Spoiling Things.

That the Americans present entirely new problems to the slow-thinking Germans is indicated by a letter from Sergeant B. S. Wuttis to his father in Pittsburgh. "German prisoners (that talk English) tell us that the Americans are crazy," he writes. "They don't know what they are doing, and are liable to come over the top any time and break up the natural order of things."

"Before the Huns started this open warfare the whole affair was cut and dried. First, the Germans would put over a barrage and then attack, and then the French would take their turn. But the marines are liable to go over any time, barrage or no barrage, which upsets the plan. Germans very much and instills the fear of the American in him. They never want to face the Americans more than once."

"You ought to see the American kids parading by. Some eighteen-year-old American will come piking up the road chasing four or five 'squireheads' (Germans), and the kid is all smiles when he tells how the whole smear of Huns were on their knees hollering 'Kamerad.' These marines are the most enthusiastic fighters in the business."

"Right back of our position are about twenty acres of potatoes, but whenever anyone tries to hoe them along comes a bunch of shrapnel, so there is no chance of loosening the ground. It is a shame, all the stuff that is planted up here; wheat ready to be harvested now, and potatoes everywhere, but no one to take care of the crop, as all the civilian population fled when the Germans came down."

When you have backache, thirder or kidneys are sure to be out of gear. Try San-ol, it does wonders for the liver, kidneys and bladder. A trial 50c bottle will convince you. Get it at the drug store.

INDIAN WAR VICTIM

First in Troops From Arizona to Fall in Battle.

The first native Arizonian to lose his life in France was an Indian, Matthew R. Rivers, better known as Phoenix as Matthew Juan, who was killed.

He was a native Pima Indian and enlisted in a Texas unit. He was known in California as "Lucky Slim," where he was a baseball pitcher of more than local reputation. He was educated at the Sherman Institute at Riverside, Cal., and was a survivor of the Tuscania sinking en route to France.

Many native Arizona Indians have enlisted in the army and navy here.
A majority expressed preference for the navy, although many of them had lived all their lives on the desert and had never seen the ocean until they enlisted.

HORSE HAS HIS DAY AGAIN

Gasoline Restrictions Bring Out Carts
and Gigs in Britain.

The petrol restrictions have brought joy and profit to the dealers in dog-carts, gigs, traps, carriages and other horse-drawn conveyances in Great Britain. Prices have been going up steadily for the last six months, until vehicles which were for disposal at firewood prices owing to the vogue of the motor are now fetching more than they cost when they were new.

The cost of redecorating these relics of the prepetrol period is also advancing by leaps and bounds. It was stated during a county court case the other day that it cost $80 to paint a van, $20 more than its original price.

What's the Use?
Phil Brown, manager of a local picture house, got word the other day that his film, "Missing," scheduled for the week of June 23, was missing. Then a day later he was glad to get word that "Missing" had showed up and was no longer missing.

Logically, "Missing" has always been "Missing." It never was found "again" because it had never been "missing" before. But what's the use?—Indianapolis News.

AMERICANS DOWN 3 PLANES

Lieut. Putnam Shoots Down a "Rum-pler" Biplane Behind the American Trench Front—His Eleventh Officially Credited Aerial
Victory.

At the British Front, Aug. 24.— American aviators are assisting the British in the present battles. They have already brought down three German planes. The exploits of the British flyers also equal the daring shown two weeks ago in the Amiens sector.

One British aviator pursued a German staff car, peppering it with his machine gun until the car turned over.
Another shot down a German plane, but had his petrol tank pierced by a bullet. He stuffed it with his handkerchief and landed safely.

Putnam Downs Five.

With the American Army in France,
Aug. 24.—Lieut. David Putnam shot down a "Rumpler" biplane behind our trench front. The German observer and pilot were both killed. This is Putnam's eleventh officially credited aerial victory.

Flyers in Big Battle.

London, Aug. 24.—Thirty German machines were brought down by the British Wednesday, the war office announces. The British lost seven machines.

Thirty-seven and a half tons of bombs were dropped on various German targets, including the Cambrai and Maroesing railway stations.

The German cities of Cologne and Frankfurt (on the Main) were heavily bombed by British raiding machines Wednesday. It was officially announced. Several bursts were observed to result from the attacks.
The railway station at Treves (Trier, on the Moselle) also was successfully bombed.

HUNS DEFEAT RUSS REBELS

Kiev Dispatch to Berlin Paper Says
1,200 Insurgents Were Cut to Pieces.

Amsterdam, Aug. 24.—German forces were victorious over a force of 1,200 Russian insurgents, well equipped with artillery and commanded by General Rosenko, near Kremenchuk, according to a Kiev dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin. In a second encounter, which occurred near Poltava, 61 miles northeast of Kremenchuk, the revolutionaries lost 800 men killed and the Germans took six machine guns and other equipment. The survivors of the revolutionary band fled, but their retreat was cut off by the pursuing Germans.

Unlimited Support to United States in the War—Condemns Film Play.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 24.—Unlimited support of the cause of the United States in the world war was pledged by the Grand Army of the Republic at the closing session of its fifty-second annual encampment. Among the resolutions adopted was one condemning a motion picture film dealing with reconstruction in the South after the Civil war on the ground that it "does gross injustice to the prominent and patriotic men of reconstruction time; is insulting to colored citizens, and tends to glorify mob law."

ARE YOU A STIP?

If Not, You Ought to Be—Here's Why

Are you a Stip?
The Stip society has been forming at Cleveland and will be made up of members who pledge themselves to "Save Till It Pinches." A campaign for members is now being conducted and is meeting with encouraging success. Organizers point out that everyone who believes in eliminating waste and extravagance as an important means of winning the war is eligible to membership.

The creed of a Stip is as follows:
"Elimination of every wasteful and extravagant article and method.
Spreading the doctrine of thrift and economy to the betterment of the community and discouragement of the enemy. Freeing industrial and transportation facilities engaged in providing unnecessary articles and services for my own selfish comfort that they may be employed in the more urgent call of humanity. Saving until it pinches so that Berlin may be captured a month sooner—saving, thereby, thousands of lives."

TELLS OF HUN ATROCITIES

Gassed Soldier, Back From Front, Describes Outrages.

Robert Forbes of Bellair, O., back from the front in France to recover from a gassing, tells that the body of John Leh Pelkey, a comrade, was horribly mutilated by the Germans.
Pelkey fell in the same battle in which Forbes was gassed. Pelkey's throat was cut from ear to ear, Forbes says, his abdomen was ripped open and his back was slashed.

able to discover the thieves since the fields are lighted.
